About the Contributors

Anthony A. Olorunnisola is Professor of Communications and head of the Department of Film/Video & Media Studies at the College of Communications, Pennsylvania State University at University Park, USA. He teaches undergraduate and graduate courses that include World Media Systems and Comparative Theories of Press Systems and has published severally on media in African transitional societies. His numerous publications include Media in South Africa after Apartheid (2006); Media and Communications Industries in Nigeria: Impacts of Neoliberal Reforms between 1999 and 2007 (2009); Political Economy of Media Transformation in South Africa (2011), co-edited with Keyan Tomaselli. He serves on the editorial boards of seven academic journals and has been guest-editor of special issues of the Journal of Communication and Language Arts and the International Journal of Social and Management Science --both issues focused on aspects of media and political culture in Africa. He was a William J. Fulbright fellow in Nigeria (2005-2006) and had been visiting professor at the Lagos State University and the University of Ibadan, Nigeria respectively. Email: axo8@psu.edu.

Aziz Douai is an Assistant Professor of Communication at the University of Ontario Institute of Technology, Canada. His research focuses on new media and activism, Arab media and democracy, global media and international conflict, among other areas of international communications. Dr. Douai’s publications have appeared in The Journal of International Communication, The Global Media Journal, First Monday, The Journal of Arab & Muslim Media Research, Arab Reform Bulletin, International Communication Research Journal, and The Westminster Papers in Communication and Culture. His most recent article, “Commenting in the online Arab public sphere: Debating the Swiss minaret ban and the ‘Ground Zero’ mosque online,” was recently published in The Journal of Computer Mediated Communication. Email: Aziz.Douai@uoit.ca.

Oluwabukola Adelaja is a Nigerian and Australian lawyer with a background in legal research and media/technology law. Oluwabukola currently works for the law firm King & Wood Mallesons as a Knowledge Consultant focusing on legal research/training in various fields of dispute resolution, holds a Master’s degree in Media and Technology Law from the University of New South Wales in Australia and is currently working towards a PhD in the area of social media regulation in Africa. Email: bukelaadela@yahoo.com.au.
Ufuoma Akpojivi is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the North West University, South Africa. He is currently looking at attitudes and perceptions of Generation Y students toward information privacy using loyalty cards, and mobile advertisement. His research interests cut across but are not limited to media policy, new media and political participation, citizens empowerment and disempowerment, democratization processes in emerging democracies, public relations, and advertising. He has presented papers at both national and international conferences and has numerous publications to his credit. Email: fuoteg@yahoo.com.

Tendai Chari is a lecturer in the Media Studies Department at the University of Venda, South Africa. He is studying for a doctorate in Media Studies at the University of Witwatersrand in South Africa. Previously, he lectured at the University of Zimbabwe where he coordinated the Media Programme, the Zimbabwe Open University, the National University of Science and Technology, (Zimbabwe) and Fort Hare University (South Africa). His research interests are online media, political communication, media representation, and media ethics. His other publications have appeared in the Journal of African Media Studies, African Identities, Global Media Journal, and Ecquid-Nov®: Journal of African Media Studies. Email: tendai.chari@yahoo.com.

Pamela Chepngetich-Omanga is a Junior Fellow at the Bayreuth International Graduate School of African Studies, at the University of Bayreuth in Germany. Her research interests are in the general scope of representation, Gender and Race studies in the Media. Her current project reflects on the dynamics of self representations of Refugees with a specific focus on photographic representations of refugees in Kenya’s Daadab Camp.

R. Bennett Furlow is a doctoral candidate in Religious Studies at Arizona State University and a research associate at the Center for Strategic Communication. His work is primarily focused on religious extremist groups and the relationship between religion and politics. His doctoral dissertation deals with the development of Islamism in Somalia from the colonial period to the present. Email: Bennett.Furlow@asu.edu.

Heather Gilberds is a doctoral candidate in the School of Journalism and Communication at Carleton University. Heather’s research aims to understand the nature of activists’ engagement with development institutions, and takes a critical look at the production and dissemination of knowledge in the context of media and communication for development. Her doctoral research explores issues related to community media activism, appropriate technology, and North-South partnerships in development initiatives. Email: heathergilberds@gmail.com.

Kennedy Javuru is a Ugandan born UK-based journalist and academic. He has extensive experience in both mainstream and community media. He has produced television documentary programs for Channel 4 and BBC television. His research interests are in the areas of alternative journalism, new media, community media, and ICTs for development. He has consulted for UNESCO, UNICEF, DFID, Development Media International (DMI), and various civil society organizations around the world. Email: javken@hotmail.com.
About the Contributors

Bellarminus Gildas Kakpovi is a PhD Student from the Department of Information and Communication Sciences at Université Libre de Bruxelles. His areas of research are hybrid, from political science to information and communication science. His PhD research is about political communication in Benin. He earned his first Master’s in Media Management at Université Senghor d’Alexandrie (Egypt), and his second one in Political Science at Université Catholique de Louvain (UCL) in Belgium. He previously worked as a journalist at Radio Tokpa and Office de Radiodiffusion et Télévision du Bénin (ORTB). Email: Bellarminus.Kakpovi@ulb.ac.be.

Twange Kasoma has a PhD in Media and Society with emphasis in International and Development Communication from the University of Oregon. She is an Assistant Professor of Mass Communications at Emory & Henry College, Virginia. Classes she teaches include: International Communication, Media and Society, Mass Media Research Methods, and Reporting, Writing and Editing. She also offers a study abroad course to her native country Zambia, where students learn through hands-on experience about journalistic practice in Africa. Her research has focused on journalistic professionalism and ethics, development reporting, media regulation, and the role of the media in African society. Email: tkasoma@ehc.edu.

Sahar Khamis is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Maryland, College Park. She is an expert on Arab and Muslim media and the former Head of the Mass Communication and Information Science Department in Qatar University. Dr. Khamis holds a PhD in Mass Media and Cultural Studies from the University of Manchester in England. She is the co-author of the book: Islam Dot Com: Contemporary Islamic Discourses in Cyberspace, Palgrave Macmillan, New York, 2009. Email: skhamis@umd.edu.

Timothy Kituri was born in Kenya where he completed his first degree, a Bachelor of Arts in Communication specializing in Public Relations from Daystar University. After a short stint as a Public Relations Officer at Pan Africa Insurance, Tim left Kenya and moved to Canada. Tim completed his second degree, a Bachelor of Commerce in Marketing at Saint Mary’s University in Halifax, Nova Scotia. After seven years in Nova Scotia, Tim moved to Victoria, B.C., where he completed his Master’s in Professional Communication with a Specialization in International and Intercultural Communication from Royal Roads University in Victoria, B.C. Tim is currently working at Royal Roads University in the Marketing Department as an Education Advisor and he is also working on a Graduate Certificate in Executive Coaching. Email: Timothy.Kituri@gmail.com.

Ullamaija Kivikuru is Emerita Professor of Journalism from the University of Helsinki, Finland. Her main research interests have been in media and democracy and development communication. She has worked as a professional journalist for more than a dozen years. After returning to the university, she has taught at the University of Helsinki and Tanzania School of Journalism (now School of Journalism and Mass Communication, University of Dar es Salaam), plus visited several eastern and southern African university departments where she was responsible for teaching journalism and media studies courses. Email: ullamaija.kivikuru@helsinki.fi.
Brandie Martin is a Doctoral Fellow in the College of Communications at The Pennsylvania State University. Her research interests include the areas of telecommunications policy, Internet governance, and the role of information and communication technologies in global development. Brandie has published articles in Telecommunications Policy, Information Technologies & International Development, Communications & Strategies, and Telematics and Informatics. Brandie graduated from Iowa State University in 2010 with an M.S. in Journalism and Mass Communication with a minor in Technology and Social Change. She will graduate with a PhD in Mass Communications from The Pennsylvania State University in 2013. Email: ms.brandiemartin@gmail.com.

Nhamo Anthony Mhiripiri is a Senior Lecturer in Media and Society Studies at the Midlands State University in Zimbabwe. He attained his M.A. in Communication and Media Studies from the University of Zimbabwe, and a PhD in Cultural and Media Studies from the University of KwaZulu-Natal, where he also did his Post-Doctoral Fellowship. He has a wide range of interests, including critical political economy of the media, film and video studies, visual anthropology, and critical media theory. He is also a published poet and short story writer. Email: nhamoanthony@yahoo.com.

Brilliant Mhlanga holds a PhD from the University of Westminster. He is currently a member of the Mass Media and Communications Group & a Lecturer in Media Cultures at the University of Hertfordshire, and remains affiliated to the National University of Science & Technology (NUST), Zimbabwe. He is currently working on a number of topics, among them a book titled: Bondage of Boundaries & the 'Toxic Other' in Postcolonial Africa: The Northern Problem & Identity Politics Today, and another project provisionally titled: On the Banality of Evil: Cultural Particularities & Genocide in Africa. His research interests include: media and development communication, community radio, ethnic minority media, ethnicity, nationalism and postcolonial studies, media policies & political economy of the media. Email: bsigabadem@gmail.com.

Mohamed Ben Moussa is a Post-Doctoral Fellow at McGill University in Montreal, Canada. He received a PhD in Communication from Concordia University, Montreal. He also holds an M.A. in Communication from The University of Leeds, UK. His research interests include new media and social movements, social media and political change, international communication, and media and development. His work appeared or is forthcoming in Westminster Papers in Communication and Culture, Arab Media and Society, Canadian Journal of Communication, among others. Email: mohamed.benmoussa@mail.mcgill.ca.

Lusike Lynete Mukhongo has a PhD in Communication Studies (Moi University, 2010). She is a Lecturer of Media and Politics in Moi University, Kenya. Her research interests include media and governance; human rights; and gender and armed conflicts. She is widely published in media, ethnic conflicts, and political mobilization in Africa. Her most recent publication: Human Rights Violation of the Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), published in African Ecclesial Review (AFER). Email: Lusikem@gmail.com.
About the Contributors

Bruce Mutsvairo won a Netherlands Institute of Southern Africa scholarship to study at the Cardiff School of Journalism (Cardiff University) in the UK, where he completed a Master of Arts (M.A.) in International Journalism in 2005. He worked as a professional journalist for the Associated Press en route to earning another postgraduate fellowship to pursue a Master of Philosophy (MPhil) in International Politics at the University of Hull, UK, before taking up his PhD studies at Leiden University. He has taught Journalism and Academic Writing in English at various Universities, including Webster University, Emerson College, University of Mississippi’s Meek School of Journalism, and New Media and Amsterdam University College. He currently conducts research on the impact of citizen journalism on the democratization of sub-Saharan African countries at the University of Twente, The Netherlands. Email: B.Mutsvairo@auc.nl.

Ayobami Ojebode holds a PhD in Development Communication from the University of Ibadan, Nigeria. His research interest is in media, democracy, and development. He has published in numerous reputable outlets. Currently the Head of the Department of Communication and Language Arts at the University of Ibadan, Dr. Ojebode has enjoyed several visiting/research scholarships in leading universities in Europe and the United States. Email: ayo.ojebode@gmail.com.

Duncan Omanga is a Junior Fellow at the Bayreuth International Graduate School of Graduate Studies (BIGSAS). He is also a PhD candidate at the Bayreuth University Media Studies Department. His research interests are mainly on the media in Africa with a bias towards how both new and old media relate to terrorism, gender, political change, and popular culture. Email: anikodani@yahoo.com.

Auma Churchill Moses Otieno is a pioneer online journalist in Kenya. Otieno is the Managing Editor for Digital at Nation Media Group, Eastern Africa’s largest media house. He has over 10 years experience in content production for digital platforms and has led newsroom change for new media. He holds a Master of Philosophy degree in Communication Studies and a Bachelor of Science degree in Communications and Public Relations, both from Moi University. He also has a diploma in Journalism from the St Augustine’s University of Tanzania and was a Fellow in Online Journalism at the New York University. Email: cotieno@gmail.com.

Terje S. Skjerdal (PhD) is Associate Professor at NLA University College, Kristiansand, Norway. He has previously served as Academic Coordinator for the M.A. programme in Journalism at Addis Ababa University, Ethiopia. His research has lately dealt with the phenomenon of competing loyalties among journalists in the Ethiopian state media. He has published various articles on African media research, and serves on the advisory boards of African Communication Research, Ecquid Novi: African Journalism Studies, and Journal of African Media Studies. Email: terje.skjerdal@nla.no.
Irina Turner is a qualified Arts Manager (Potsdam University of Applied Sciences, Germany) and holds a M.A. degree in Media Theory and Practice from the University of Cape Town, South Africa. She is currently completing her PhD project at the Bayreuth International Graduate School of African Studies (BIGSAS) at Bayreuth University, Germany. As an affiliate to SACOMM, South African Communication Association, Irina’s research interest lies in interdisciplinary approaches combining aspects of Cultural and Media Studies with Linguistics to study society, culture, and language in post-apartheid South Africa. Her focus is on questions of politics, gender, and language change. Since 2005, Irina has been working as an administrator with a focus on Human Resources and Development in the academic, NGO, and private sectors in South Africa and Germany. She is also an experienced tutor for Media Studies and currently lectures as the chair of African Language Studies at Bayreuth University. Email: turner.irina@gmail.com.

Bouziane Zaid was born in Casablanca, Morocco. He obtained his PhD (2009) in Communication from the University of South Florida. His research interests are in the areas of media law and policy, public service broadcasting, development communication, and critical media studies. He is author of Public Service Television Policy and National Development in Morocco: Contents, Production, and Audiences, and co-author of Mapping Digital Media: Morocco. Zaid now works as an Assistant Professor and Chair of the Communication Studies Program and serves as the Undergraduate Program Coordinator at the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at Al Akhawayn University in Ifrane, Morocco. Email: B.Zaid@aui.ma.