About the Contributors

***

Haya Ajjan is an Assistant Professor of Management Information Systems at Elon University. She earned her PhD from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte’s Belk College of Business. Her research focuses on better understanding the impact of technology use on individuals, groups, and organizations. In particular, she is interested in understanding the role of emerging technologies such as wikis, blogs, and social networks in management information systems. Her research has appeared in The Internet and Higher Education, Information Resources Management Journal, and in multiple regional and national conferences.

Husam Alfahl is a PhD candidate at Griffith Business School, Griffith University and his research interest includes information technology adoption, electronic commerce, and mobile commerce. His field of study is in Organisational Mobile Commerce Adoption looking at the factors that affect such adoption. Husam holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Management Information Systems, and Master of Business Administration and Master of Information Technology (MBA/ MIT). Husam is a graduate assistant in the Department of Management Information Systems, College of Business Administration at Taibah University, Saudi Arabia.

Scott Buechler is an Assistant Professor of Business Communications at Elon University. He earned his PhD from the University of Utah and his MBA from the University of Tennessee. His research focuses on the deployment of new communications technologies on internal and external business communications, for purposes especially of incorporating new and innovative pedagogical techniques into his business communications courses.
Victor Chang was an IT Manager/IT Lead in one of NHS Trusts, UK. He is working as a Senior Lecturer at Leeds Metropolitan University since September 2012. He previously worked as an assistant professor and IT architect at Business School, University of Greenwich, while doing and completing his part-time research with the University of Southampton. He helps organisations in achieving good Cloud design, deployment and services. He has 24 publications in his PhD, and offers 100% effort for his full-time work. With 14 years of IT experience, he is one of the most active practitioners and academics in Cloud Computing in England.

Ye-Sho Chen received his Ph.D. degree in Operations Research from Purdue University in 1985. He is a Professor of Management Information Systems in the Department of Information Systems and Decision Sciences, E. J. Ourso College of Business, Louisiana State University. He is the Director of Emerging Markets Initiative in the College. He also holds the Majory B. Ourso Excellence in Teaching Professorship and the Robert J. Peltier Professorship in MBA Studies in the College. He received The Tiger Athletic Foundation Tenured Faculty Teaching Award in 2011, Tenured Faculty Teaching Award in 2007, and The Erich Sternberg Foundation Excellence in Teaching Award in 1992. Dr. Chen has published more than 100 papers in journals and conference proceedings. Dr. Chen’s major interest of teaching, research, and consulting is to help companies to grow globally through the “Flying High, Landing Soft” curriculum of global entrepreneurship.

C. Dossena is a Post-Doc at the Department of Economics and Management Science, University of Pavia. She took her PHD degree with a doctoral dissertation entitled “Web community, Web Corporate Reputation and organizational learning: implications of the social media diffusion within firms”. Her research interests include Web-based technologies and user-generated media, Online corporate reputation, crowdsourcing, change management and tourism and cultural districts.

A. Francesconi, PhD in 2005, is Researcher and Aggregate Professor of Organization Theory and Design and Management of Information Systems at the Department of Economics and Management Science, University of Pavia. His research interests include organization design within public and private sectors, both profit and no profit (in particular foundations, healthcare, tourism and cultural districts), management and assessment of healthcare technologies, tourism and cultural districts, Web-based technologies and user-generated media, open innovation.

Richard Hartshorne is an Associate Professor of Educational Technology at the University of Central Florida. He earned his PhD in Curriculum and Instruction from the University of Florida. At the University of Central Florida, his teaching focuses on the integration of technology into the educational landscape, as well as instructional design and development. His research interests primarily involve the production and effective integration of instructional technology into the teaching and learning environment. The major areas of his research interest are rooted in online teaching and learning, technology and teacher education, and the integration of emerging technology into the k-post-secondary curriculum.

Kayvan Lavassani is an Assistant Professor in North Carolina Central University’s School of Business. He has over a decade of management, entrepreneurial, and consulting experience in international business, manufacturing, high-tech and public sector. He has conducted several empirical studies and has published over 50 papers in academic journals, books and proceedings. Dr. Lavassani has received several awards from Canadian and US conferences honoring his excellence in research. He has also served as reviewer, advisor, associate editor, program chair, and coordinator of several international conferences and journals. He is currently serving as the chair of Technology & Innovation Management division in Administrative Science Association of Canada. Dr. Lavassani is enthusiastic about connecting his academic research with real world business practices and practitioners. He has been invited to present his research works in several occasions for Canadian, European and Chinese delegations representing businesses and government agencies.
About the Contributors

Thang Le Dinh has been a professor at Département des sciences de la gestion, Université du Québec à Trois-Rivières, Trois-Rivières, Canada since 2008. From 2006-2008, Le Dinh was an Assistant Professor at Faculty of Business Administration, University of Moncton, New Brunswick, Canada. From 2001-2005, Le Dinh was a Senior reseacher, Information System Department, University of Geneva, Switzerland. From 1992-2001, Le Dinh was a Lecturer, Faculty of Information technology, University of Natural Sciences – HoChiMinh city, VietNam

Alan D. Smith is presently University Professor of Operations Management in the Department of Management and Marketing at Robert Morris University, Pittsburgh, PA. Previously he was Chair of the Department of Quantitative and Natural Sciences and Coordinator of Engineering Programs at the same institution, as well as Associate Professor of Business Administration and Director of Coal Mining Administration at Eastern Kentucky University. He holds concurrent PhDs in Engineering Systems/Education from The University of Akron and in Business