About the Authors

Wu Mei Associate Professor of the Department of Communication, University of Macau, received a Bachelor of Arts in English, Certificate in Journalism (University of Hawaii), MA in Media Studies and Ph.D. in Communication (Concordia University). She specializes in media technology and communication studies. She has conducted a series of research studies on the Internet and telephony/mobile telephony in China. Her publications appear in major journals and by well-known publishers both in English and Chinese including Routledge, IGI Global, People’s University Press, Javnost-The Public, Media Studies Journal, International Journal of Sociotechnology and Knowledge Development, Global Media and Communication and China Computer-Mediated Communication Studies. She received the 2011 Academic Award of the China New Media Communication Association (CNMCA), which represents the highest quality research in the field of new media communication studies in China. She was a Visiting Fellow at the Oxford Internet Institute, University of Oxford and Visiting Research Fellow at the East Asia Institute, National University of Singapore. Her research interests also cover journalism and globalization with a focus on press systems in Southeast Asia.

Peter Jakubowicz received a Bachelor of Arts in English Literature and Certificate in TESL from Sir George Williams University, Master of Arts in Educational Studies from Concordia University and Doctor of Philosophy in Education from The Catholic University of Portugal. He specializes in business communication, English as a Second Language (ESL), English editing, online learning/teaching and education. Working for the Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK) since 1998, he is currently the Senior College Tutor of Chung Chi College, CUHK. He is a Business English Communication training specialist and conducted business communications skills workshops for major universities in Hong Kong and Macau. Clients also include corporations such as PCCW, China Telecom (HK), The China Development Bank (CDB), The Asia Pacific Institute of Business and numerous private and academic organizations.

Chengyu Cao received a dual bachelor degree in Journalism and Economics and a MA in Communication from Tsinghua University. She currently works as a financial journalist for China Securities Journal in Beijing, covering mutual funds, trusts and securities.