About the Authors

Mahmud A. Shareef is currently a research associate, Ontario Research Network for Electronic Commerce (ORNEC), Ottawa, Canada. He is also a PhD candidate in Management of the Sprott School of Business, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. He received his graduate degree from both the Institute of Business Administration, University of Dhaka, Bangladesh in Business Administration and Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada in civil engineering. His research interest is focused on quality management of e-commerce and e-government. He has published more than 30 papers addressing adoption and quality issues of e-commerce and e-government in different refereed conference proceedings and international journals. He is the author of 2 book chapters in information technology handbook and has published 2 reputed books on quality management issues. He is an internationally recognized information technology (IT) consultant and has presented seminal papers in IT seminars. He was the recipient of more than 10 academic awards including 2 Best Research Paper Awards in the UK and Canada.

Yogesh K. Dwivedi is a lecturer in Information Systems at the School of Business and Economics, Swansea University, Wales, UK. He obtained his PhD entitled, Investigating consumer adoption, usage and impact of broadband: UK households, and MSc in information systems from the School of Information Systems, Computing and Mathematics, Brunel University, UK. His doctoral research has been awarded the ‘Highly Commended Award’ by the European Foundation for Management and Development (EFMD) and Emerald Group Publishing Ltd. His research focuses on the adoption and diffusion of information and communication technology (ICT).

Michael D. Williams is a professor in the School of Business and Economics at Swansea University in the UK. He holds a BSc from the CNAA, an MEd from the University of Cambridge, and a PhD from the University of Sheffield. He is a member of the British Computer Society and is registered as a chartered engineer. Prior to entering academia professor Williams spent twelve years developing and implementing ICT systems in both public and private sectors in a variety of domains including finance, telecommunications, manufacturing, and local government, and since entering academia, has acted as consultant for both public and private organizations. He is the author of numerous fully refereed and invited papers within the ICT domain, has editorial board membership of a number of academic journals, and has obtained external research funding from sources including the European Union, the Nuffield Foundation, and the Welsh Assembly Government.

Nitish Singh is assistant professor of international business at the Boeing Institute of International Business at Saint Louis University. Previously, he was a professor at California State University (CSU) Chico and headed the localization certification program there. His educational efforts in the field of localization have been supported by U.S. Department of Education, CSU, Google, HP, IBM, Microsoft and other companies. He is the co-author of The Culturally Customized Web Site: Customizing Web Sites for the Global Marketplace. Nitish holds a PhD in marketing and international business from Saint Louis University, an MBA from Pune University-India and an MA in marketing from University of Glamorgan, UK. He has been active in training and consulting in the field of localization for websites, international e-business strategy, doing business in China and India, and marketing to Hispanics online. Nitish is the recipient of research excellence awards from CSU and Saint Louis University and was named one of the top 10 reviewers for International Marketing Review. His research has appeared in the Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of Business Research, Psychology & Marketing, International Marketing Review, Journal of Electronic Commerce Research, Thunderbird International Business Review, Journal of Advertising Research, Multinational Business Review, Journal of Consumer Behavior, and others.

* * *

Princely Ifinedo is an assistant professor at the Shannon School of Business, Cape Breton University, Canada. He earned his PhD in information systems science from the University of Jyväskylä, Finland. He also holds an MBA in international management from Royal Holloway College, University of London, UK, a MSc in informatics from Tallinn University of Technology, Estonia and a BSc in mathematics/computer science from the University of Port-Harcourt, Nigeria. His current research interests include e-learning, e-business, e-government, ERP success measurement, social informatics, IT/business alignment, and the diffusion of IS/IT in transiting and developing economies. He has presented at various international IS conferences and his works have appeared in such journals as Journal of Computer Information Systems, Enterprise Information Systems, Journal of Information Technology Management, and Journal of Global Information Technology Management. Dr. Ifinedo has authored (and co-authored) 60 peer-reviewed papers. He is affiliated with AIS, ASAC, DSI, and ACM.

Joseph P. Little is a PhD student in international business and marketing at the John Cook School of Business, Saint Louis University. He received his MBA from Indiana University Southeast. His research interests include cross-cultural consumer behavior focusing on consumer animosity and consumer response to corporate social responsibility. Joseph has presented his research at the Academy of International Business and the American Marketing Association annual meetings.

Ji Eun Park was born and raised in In-cheon, Korea. After earning her Bachelor of Arts degree from Chung-Ang University, Korea, she pursued her MBA degree from Korea Development Institute of public policy and management in 2002. Since August 2006, Ji Eun has been actively involved in teaching and research at the John Cook School of Business at Saint Louis University. Her research interests have focused primarily on Website localization, corporate social responsibility, and animosity in an international context.
Mohini Singh is professor of Information Technology and Digital Business in the School of Business Information Technology at RMIT University in Australia. She is internationally recognised for her research and publications in the areas of information technology, e-business and e-government. Her track record includes research on e-business opportunities and challenges, e-business evaluation, B2B e-business issues, e-procurement, e-business intermediaries and e-government; outcomes of which have resulted in journal publications, book chapters and international conference proceedings. She is the principal editor of two highly regarded books on e-business and serves as a member on the editorial boards of several international journals. She has delivered key note addresses at international forums and presented her research on e-business to the Parliament of Victoria for policy development on telecommunications infrastructure for business in rural Victoria, by invitation. She is the program chair, for the forthcoming International Conference on E-Government 2008 - http://academic-conferences.org/iceg/iceg2008/iceg08-home.html

Serkan Yalcin is a doctoral student at the John Cook School of Business, Saint Louis University (MO, USA). He has academic experience in different regions of the world such as Turkey, Republic of Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, and the U.S. His research interests include international marketing strategy, internationalization of brands, e-commerce, culture and localization, and cross-cultural consumer behavior. Some of his research appeared in such academic journals as Multinational Business Review, Journal of Promotion Management, and Journal of Developmental Entrepreneurship.