Joseph M. Kizza, currently a professor of computer science at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, received a PhD in computer science from the University of Nebraska – Lincoln. He is a member of ACM and an internationally renowned speaker on social computing and information security and assurance. He has published extensively in journals and conference proceedings, and authored seven books on computer ethics, network security, and cyber ethics. Some of these books have been translated into several languages.

Florence M. Kizza, currently an assistant editor of The Greentree Gazette Magazine in West Palm, Florida, double majored in information studies and communication at Florida State University. She also holds a master’s degree in journalism from the University of Missouri-Columbia.