About the Authors

Nancy Johnson is the associate dean of the School of Business at Capella University. She had been an assistant professor of MIS with Metropolitan State University, Minneapolis, MN from 1991-2000. She was in private industry for twenty years prior to that. Author of four book chapters and numerous articles, and conference presenter, she was also a guest editor for a special edition on telecommuting of the Journal of End User Computing. She has also been a book and Website reviewer for Choice Journal for five years. She was a Fulbright Scholar in 1992 in Malaysia. She holds a BS and an MBA from University of Minnesota and a PhD from Walden University. Her research interests include distance education, human factors in successful change management, justification methodologies of IT investment in the public sector, and international use of IT. (njohnson@capella.edu)

* * *

Frédéric Adam is a lecturer in the Department of Accounting, Finance and Information Systems at University College Cork in Ireland. He is also a senior researcher with the Executive Systems Research Centre (ESRC). He holds a PhD from the National University of Ireland and Université Paris VI jointly. His research has been published in a number of international journals including the Journal of Strategic Information Systems, Decision Support Systems and Systèmes d’Information et Management. He is the co-author of the Manager’s Guide to Current Issues in Information Systems and the Practical Guide to Postgraduate Research in the Business Area (both published by Blackhall Publishing, Dublin, Ireland).

Dr. Yehuda Baruch is a senior lecturer at the School of Management, UEA, Norwich, UK, and formerly a visiting research fellow at London Business School. He earned a DSc in management and behavioral sciences from the Technion, Israel. His research interests are human resource management, mainly career management systems, teleworking, and computer-mediated communication. He has published in these fields in a number of journals, including Human Relations, Organizational Dynamics, Human Resource Management and Organization Studies.

Martin Boisvert is the vice-president of S.I.X. Inc. in Montreal.

Joseph R. Bumblis is currently a network management architect with U S WEST in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Previous positions include manager of systems software development at Seagate Technology, systems engineer/systems architect for Control Data Corporation, computer communications design specialist at McDonald Douglas Space Systems Company, a researcher and senior member of technical staff at MCC, and a development program manager at Tandem Computers.

Joe received a master of science degree from the University of Minnesota in management of technology, and a bachelor of science degree from Ohio University in electrical engineering. Joe is active in the IEEE and as an adjunct instructor of information technology and management for Concordia University and Metropolitan University in Minneapolis, MN.

Gregory Crossan is an associated researcher of the Executive Systems Research Centre (ESRC) at University College Cork in Ireland. After successfully completing his master of business studies in management information and managerial accounting systems (MIMAS) in the Department of Accounting, Finance and Information Systems, he has taken up employment in an Irish software company and develops business solutions for the World Wide Web. His research interests include the Internet and the World Wide Web and the use of IT for a better integration of the disabled in the work environment.

Kitty de Bruin is the managing director of TelewerkForum (www.telewerkforum.nl). She can be reached at e-mail: kitty.de.bruin@telewerkforum.nl.

Susan J. Harrington is a professor in information systems at the J. Whitney Bunting School of Business at Georgia College & State University, Milledgeville, GA. Her interests include ethical decision making in organizations, IT adoption and diffusion, and corporate culture. She has published in Journal of Business Ethics, MIS Quarterly, DATA BASE for Advances in Information Systems, IEEE Transactions on Professional Communication and Academy of Management Executive, as well as other management journals.

Janet A. Henquinet received her PhD from the University of Minnesota and is an associate professor of management at Metropolitan State University in Minneapolis, MN. Prior to joining Metropolitan State she held a variety of human resource management positions in private and public sector organizations. She currently teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in management, organizational behavior and human resource management with a special interest in international human resource management.

Donna Weaver McCloskey is a graduate of the University of Delaware (BS), Widener University (MBA) and Drexel University (PhD). She is currently an assistant professor of MIS in the School of Business Administration at Widener University. Her research interests include technology acceptance, data warehousing and the impact of technology on changing work roles. Dr. McCloskey’s research has been published in a number of books and journals and has been presented at international and national conferences.

Diana Page, PhD, is an associate professor with the Department of Management & MIS at the University of West Florida. Her primary teaching areas include organizational behavior and business communication. Her work experience includes supervisory and management positions in the retail trade, human resources and the public school system. Dr. Page frequently consults with organizations such as Bell South, Instrument Control Service (a division of General Electric), Health & Rehabilitative Services, local hospitals and utility companies. Her current research interests include virtual teams, careers, gender issues and management pedagogy. She is published in journals such as the Journal of Social Behavior and Personality, Education, the Journal of Business Ethics, and the Organizational Development Journal.

Alain Pinsonneault holds a PhD from the University of California at Irvine and is the Imasco Associate Professor of Information Systems in the Faculty of Management at McGill University. Prior to joining McGill University in June 1999, he was an associate professor at the École des Hautes Études Commerciales (HEC-Montreal) and the director of the PhD program.
Alain Pinsonneault won numerous awards for his research and his teaching, among which is the Doctoral Award of the International Center for Information Technology and MCI Communications in the USA in 1990. His current research interests include the organizational and individual impacts of information technology, electronic commerce, group support systems, and IT department management. He has published papers in Management Science, Management Information Systems Quarterly, Information Systems Research, the Journal of Management Information Systems, Decision Support Systems, and the European Journal of Operational Research.

Richard Platt, PhD, is an assistant professor of management information systems at the University of West Florida in Pensacola, Florida. His primary teaching areas include strategic planning and management of information systems, electronic commerce, and information systems design and development. He is published in the areas of electronic commerce, competitive uses for information systems and technology, managing technology enhanced teams, and critical success factors for IS projects. He consults in the areas of database analysis and design, and the planning, design, and development of all levels of information systems in both public and private IS organizations.

Jay Rodstein is a principal environmental, health and safety engineer for Honeywell. He has worked at the Honeywell Technology Center for seven years. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in chemistry from Western Maryland College and a master’s in business administration from the University of Pittsburgh. Jay has worked in the environmental and safety fields for 19 years and is a certified hazardous materials manager (CHMM).

Cynthia P. Ruppel is an assistant professor in information systems in the College of Business at The University of Toledo, Toledo, OH. Her interests include telecommuting and other forms of virtual work, IT innovation, adoption and diffusion, as well as organizational culture and change management. She has published in DATA BASE for Advances in Information Systems, Journal of End User Computing, IEEE Transactions on Professional Communication and Information Resource Management Journal.

Ian Smith is the Clifford Chance Professor of Employment Law at the University of East Anglia, UK. He is a barrister with Chambers in the Middle Temple in London, specializing in employment law and health and safety issues. He is also an industrial arbitrator for ACAS. Among his numerous books is Smith and Wood Industrial Law, the leading textbook in this area; and he is an editor of Harvey on Industrial Relations and Employment Law, the standard practitioner reference work.

Kirk St. Amant has a BA in anthropology and in government from Bowdoin College and an MA in technical and scientific communication from James Madison University. He is currently enrolled in the University of Minnesota’s PhD program in rhetoric and technical and scientific communication where his research interests include international and intercultural communication and communication in the on-line environment. In addition to being a student, he does independent consulting work on international communication and localization issues. He can be reached at stam0032@tc.umn.edu.

Kate Watters is an occupational health nurse for Honeywell. She received her bachelor of science degree in nursing from St. Olaf College in Northfield, MN. She is a registered nurse and has been in the occupational health field for 16 years. She has worked at Honeywell for 10 years. She is currently managing the occupational health department at the Honeywell Technology Center in Minneapolis, MN.