Editing and completing an authoritative and comprehensive scholarly research publication such as the Encyclopedia of Information Science and Technology, Third Edition requires tremendous contributions, and a great deal of assistance from large groups of scholars and staff. The primary objective of this encyclopedia is to provide the most up-to-date scholarly coverage of all topics related to information science and technology as it is applied to a number of discipline areas, such as business, engineering, medicine, education, social science, humanities, public administration, and computer science. I am indebted to all of the authors for their excellent contributions to this edition of the encyclopedia.

All submitted manuscripts to this edition underwent a double-blind peer review process in order to achieve the highest level of quality and accuracy. I am most thankful to all of the reviewers of this edition for providing their expertise and their rigorous, unbiased assessment of the manuscripts assigned to them on a double-blind basis. I would also like to express my gratitude and deep appreciation to the members of the Editorial Advisory Board for their wisdom, guidance, and assistance with various decisions throughout the editorial process.

I would also like to convey my deep appreciation and gratefulness to IGI Global's Managing Director, Ms. Lindsay Johnston, for all of her wisdom and encouragement. Additionally, I would like to express my appreciation to the editorial staff at IGI Global for their valuable assistance in support of this project: Chris Shearer, Copy Editing Manager, Kayla Wolfe, Acquisitions Editor, Vince D'Imperio, Editorial Assistant, Jennifer Yoder, Production Editor, and most of all to Jan Travers, Director of Intellectual Property and Contracts and Austin DeMarco, Managing Editor for all of their endless efforts. Much gratitude goes to all of those who have provided me immeasurable amounts of knowledge, wisdom, and patience during the past few decades. This book is dedicated to my beautiful Basha for all of the love and joy she provided to me during her living years.
