

Acknowledgments

This book could not have been accomplished without the support, cooperation, and collaboration of many persons and institutions. The first acknowledgment goes to the chapter authors, with whom it has been a remarkably easy process to work. Each chapter was reviewed anonymously by three reviewers. They worked hard and added a lot to the book and acknowledgment is expressed to each of them. With several exceptions, the chapter authors contributed reviews of other chapters, and deserve recognition. In addition, the following external reviewers examined one or more of the chapters: Rob Burke, Rafat Fazeli, Jon Gant, Murray Jennex, Mahmoud Kaboudan, Dick Lawrence, Wilson Liu, Doug Mende, Monica Perry, Mike Phoenix, and Vijay Sugurmaran.

At University of Redlands, appreciation is expressed to campus leaders, including President James Appleton for fostering spatial information science on the campus over many years. Although I arrived on the campus as an applied GIS researcher, it was the university's atmosphere and proximity to ESRI Inc. that helped me grow as a teacher and fuller researcher in this field. I thank the university's Information Technology Services for technology support and to the School of Business Faculty Support Services for a variety of assistance at many stages.

Early discussions of the project with Rob Burke and Tony Burns from ESRI Inc. were helpful in formulating idea and scope of the book, and late discussion with Mike Phoenix of ESRI Inc. was a stimulus to wrapping it up. Acknowledgment is expressed to them, as well as to ESRI President Jack Dangermond for his interest and forward to the book. I would also like to acknowledge the Association for Information Systems, which has sponsored a GIS track for quite a few years at its annual conference, and which stimulated contacts and ideas for this book.

At Idea Group, special thanks to the book's support team, especially Michele Rossi, Development Editor, Jan Travers, Senior Managing Editor, Mehdi Khosrow-Pour, Senior Academic Editor, and Jennifer Sundstrom, Assistant Marketing Manager. They were cooperative, helpful, and offered insights and expertise that improved the book.
