

Acknowledgment

Editing this book has been a delightful and rewarding experience. For conceptual and content contributions, I owe a debt of gratitude to all the authors that have contributed to this book. I would like to thank them all sincerely for their excellent and much committed work (as a virtual team between the editor and the author/s) and transnational tele-cooperation in the various revisions of their manuscripts. The responsibility for content and potential errors remains of course with the author/s exclusively. IGI Global management and staff are thankfully acknowledged for their efforts in making this book a success. I also would like to thank my family for their love and support during the countless hours spent in making this book a reality. Ultimately, I would consider my goal met if this book extends the existing body of knowledge in theory and practice, and serves as a valuable resource for focused research in the field of global information technology/systems management.
