

Acknowledgments

The editor would like to thank all of the authors for their insights and excellent contributions to this book. I also want to thank the group of anonymous reviewers who assisted me in the peer-reviewing process and provided comprehensive, critical and, constructive reviews. Each Editorial Advisory Board member has made a big contribution in guidance and assistance.

The editor wishes to acknowledge the help of all involved in the development process of this book, without whose support the project could not have been satisfactorily completed. Linxi Liao and MinSun Ku, two graduate assistants, are hereby graciously acknowledged for their diligent work. I owe my thanks to Karen Dennis for lending a hand in the tedious process of proof-reading. A further special note of thanks goes to the staff at Idea Group Inc., whose contributions have been invaluable throughout the entire process, from inception to final publication. Particular thanks go to Sara Reed, Jan Travers, and Renée Davies, who continuously prodded via e-mail to keep the project on schedule, and to Mehdi Khosrow-Pour, whose enthusiasm motivated me to accept his invitation to join this project.

My appreciation is also due the Global Education Center at MSU for awarding me a Global Education Fund. I would also like to extend my thanks to my brothers Zhengxian, Shubert (an artist, <http://www.portraitartist.com/wang/bio.htm>), and sister Jixian, who stood solidly behind me and contributed in their own sweet little ways. Thanks go to all Americans, since it would not have been possible for the four of us to come to the U.S. without their support of different scholarships.

Finally, I want to thank my family: my parents, Houde Wang and Junyan Bai for their encouragement; my wife Hongyu for her unfailing support, and my son Leigh for being without a dad during this project. By the way, our second boy Leon was born on August 4, 2004. Like a baby, DWM has a bright and promising future.

*John Wang, Ph.D.
Wangj@mail.montclair.edu
Dept. Information and Decision Sciences
School of Business
Montclair State University
Montclair, New Jersey
USA*