

Acknowledgments

Intellectual growth can only occur when one has a supportive, insightful, and challenging group of colleagues. I am fortunate to have many such close colleagues. Thanks to James Clements, Alfreda Dudley-Sponaugle, Julie Jacko, Doris Lidtke, Chao Lu, Gabriele Meiselwitz, Anthony Norcio, Jenny Preece, Andrew Sears, Cheryl Schroeder-Thomas, and countless other colleagues at Towson University and in the human-computer interaction community. In addition, my work on community partnerships has been financially supported by the Center for Applied Information Technology at Towson University and the Shriver Center at UMBC.

Special thanks go to the enthusiastic publishing team at Idea Group Publishing. Michele Rossi was always available to provide valuable suggestions in an upbeat manner. Mehdi Khosrowpour provided continuing encouragement and the benefit of his publishing experience. Thanks also to Carrie Stull for assisting with the marketing of the book.

An edited book is a group process, and it is the contributing authors who make the book into a reality. Thanks to the authors for their valuable contributions, and best wishes for continued success in their community partnerships. In addition, I also want to thank all of the people who assisted in the reviewing process. And thanks to the continuing support of my close family—Libby and Martin Lazar, Berniece and Herbert Kumin, Mollie Lazar, and Joel and Sandra Lazar.

Dr. Jonathan Lazar, Editor
Towson University
Towson, Maryland, USA
October 2001