

Acknowledgment

The editors would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the collation and review process of the book, without whose support the project could not have been satisfactorily completed. Both the editors appreciate the resources, both in time and access to scholarly articles, of their employing universities: AUT University and The University of Auckland.

The call for chapters sought experts in the field from far and wide as it was hoped to provide the audience with a global perspective. The editors thank the various professional organizations who agreed to include the call for chapters in their mail-outs. This has resulted in an international approach to the book.

The editors are indebted to the authors, without whom the project could not have succeeded. They come from different disciplines and areas of expertise and provide wide scholarly cover of the field. Many of the authors also acted as referees which is an essential component of the book development. Thanks to the authors for engaging in this process with professionalism.

Many thanks to Dr. Neil Pattison MD, who agreed to review the book and contribute the forward. In addition he introduced the authors to the exciting area of women's health informatics nearly fifteen years ago and encouraged us to research in this area.

Editing a book is an undertaking and we couldn't have done it without the support and guidance of the publishing team at IGI Global. Particular thanks go to Julia Mosemann, who patiently steered us through the editing process and kept us track!

Finally we would like to thank our daughters: Alice and Rosie, who have put up with mummy and daddy disappearing to the office at all hours to finish 'the book'. We hope you find it interesting and useful.
