

Acknowledgments

We have been closely observing various developments and changes in this field of e-learning for quite sometime now. Many institutions and organizations across the globe are engaged in developing e-learning technologies. Educational institutions are either using packages and technologies developed by commercial houses or developing their own technologies in-house. Continued interactions with friends and colleagues involved in designing, developing, and training for e-learning provided us necessary input to translate those experiences to this present volume as a compendium of case studies on successes or pitfalls of e-learning practices.

This has been a most rewarding experience for us, as we express our heartfelt thanks and gratitude to all our contributing authors for their excellent contributions and insights. During the long course of development of this book, some of the contributors due to their other engagements could not submit their work on time. We thank them also for their association, encouragement, and support provided for this work.

Any work of this magnitude and quantum certainly needs high quality standards, which were obtained through a double-blind peer-review process of the submissions. The authors of the chapters included in the book were kind and supportive enough to review and provide suggestions, constructive comments on the chapters for maintaining high quality submissions. In addition to our authors, we have our most sincere thanks to Dr. Kinshuk, Massey University, New Zealand; Professor Paul Kawachi, Kurume Shin-Ai Women's College, Japan; Dr. Lynn Hunt, Massey University, New Zealand; Dr. Michael Sankey, University of Southern Queensland, Australia; Dr. Geraldine Torrisi-Steele, Griffith University, Australia; and Mr. Karthik, Bangalore, India. Their critical and constructive comments on the chapters are deeply appreciated and acknowledged.

This is our second edited book with Idea Group Inc. We would like to place on record our special thanks and appreciation to the publishing team at Idea Group Inc. We are deeply grateful to Dr. Mehdi Khosrow-Pour, DBA; Ms. Kristin Roth, Development Editor; and Mr.

Andrew Bundy, Assistant Marketing Manager. We found them ready to help at all times. Their quick support and attendance to our queries enabled us to keep the book development schedule on right track. Ms. Kristin Roth deserves a special thank you note for the continuous interactions through e-mails as a result of which the project was managed in time. Dr. Ramesh Sharma would like to express his gratitude to the Idea Group Inc. and his co-editor, Dr. Sanjaya Mishra, for the support received during his illness, at the crucial finalization stage of the book. Dr Sharma further thanks his wife, Madhu Sharma, and kids, Aakanksha and Apoorv, for being there and giving the best kind of support.

We also thank our employer, the Indira Gandhi National Open University, and its staff members for providing us support and encouragement to bring out this quality work. We also wish to thank our respective family members and friends who have been fully supportive, without which this work would not have been brought to fruition. Especially Dr. Mishra would like to say thank you to his wife, Dr. Sweta Panigrahi, for all the support and understanding she has shown, without which the task would have been quite difficult.

It is also worthwhile to mention here that all the software and trademarks mentioned in the book chapters or referenced therein are the property and trademarks of their respective owners.

Last but not least, we once again express our sincere thanks to our contributing authors for sharing their experiences in an excellent manner. They have been very accommodating, in spite of their preoccupations and engagements, and obliged us by submitting chapters well within the schedule.
