

Acknowledgments

First and foremost, I would like to thank all of the contributors to this volume for their work and commitment. I have enjoyed working with each of you, and have enjoyed learning from the ideas and thoughts shared during the writing and review process. This has truly been a collaborative effort, and I thank all of you for the time and intellectual energies you have given to this volume.

I thank Idea Group Publishing for their support of this book, in particular, Michele Rossi, Jennifer Sundstrom and Amanda Appicello for their professionalism throughout this project.

I thank the School of Information Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee for the resources used in the completion of this book and to my colleagues for their support and friendship.

As always, I dearly thank my parents, Gail and Jack Buchanan, for simply being who they are and for their never-ending support and love.

An extra special thanks goes to my husband, Bill Topritzhofer. His enduring support, assurances and old-fashioned love during the months of work made this volume possible. Thanks, Bill, for assuring me I was not crazy to propose a book while eight months pregnant, and for your belief that I could complete it even with an inquisitive baby around.

And, of course, to Zachary, my dear son, who somehow became a one year old during the process of this book. My love for you transcends all boundaries. May you grow and live in a peaceful and just world, real or virtual.
