

Acknowledgment

This book reflects the ideas and contributions of many individuals. I have always been deeply interested in the discipline of enterprise architecture. Given that the government sector presents some very complex challenges, it has been my area of research for several years now. As part of this journey, I have been privileged to contribute to Singapore's Government Enterprise Architecture; collaborate with some outstanding experts at the United Nations and the World Bank; advise several national governments through their journeys and be part of the government enterprise architecture community globally. All of the above have reinforced my passion and interest, and provided the trigger for me to conceive this book. This book is an excellent example of team effort.

First and foremost, I would like to thank IGI Global for giving me the opportunity to continue my wonderful collaboration with them. This is my third book with IGI Global, and it has been a great partnership so far. Secondly, I would like to thank all contributing chapter authors. Their contribution has been invaluable. They are all well experienced and respected experts representing both academia and practice.

Last, but not the least, the contribution of the Editorial Advisory Board (EAB) cannot be overstated. These are globally recognized experts who took time off their busy schedules to review the chapters and provide constructive feedback to improve the overall quality of chapters. Thus, the EAB played a crucial role in enhancing the quality of the book. Interacting with them over the years has enriched my understanding in many ways.

This book would not have become a reality without the blessings of my mother, Shrimati Anima Saha, and my father, the late Shri Jagatbandhu Saha. I thank Neeta, my wife, for her love, support, and patience, while this was being written. A special word of love goes to our most adorable daughter Anushka. Neeta and I were blessed with Anushka when I started working on my first book, and now with this fourth book, she is on the verge of entering primary school.
