

Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without the help of a large number of people. I would like to acknowledge those who were involved in collating the book and assisting with the review of the chapters. The authors who provided the chapters deserve particular mention. Thank you for the insights provided by your chapters and the contributions you've made to our understanding of two very important subjects.

Ultimately, the success of this book is possible mainly because of the professional support provided by Mehdi Khosrow-Pour and the Idea Group team. Special thanks to Amanda Appicello and other staff members at Idea Group, Inc. who guided this whole process. Thanks for their patience in working with me as editor.

Finally, I would like to thank Joan, my wife, and my sons, Julian and Jeremy, for their love and patient support while I spent time on this project.

Gerald Grant
Carleton University, Canada
March 4, 2003