

Acknowledgment

The authors would like to acknowledge the publishing team at IGI Global, and especially Rebecca Beistline, whose suggestions throughout the overall development of this book were very effective.

I wish to thank IBM because it was fundamental in my technical and professional education. Furthermore, IBM gave me the opportunity to be introduced to high-level research.

Special thanks go to Salento University that is giving me the opportunity to research in a stimulating and very satisfying environment. I would like to thank the students of computer engineering that first experimented on the use of the methodologies described in this book, validating them in exam projects and especially in graduation and doctoral theses.

Above all, I wish to express my gratitude to Professor Paolo Paolini that not only has introduced me to academic research, but also because he is my mentor and an extraordinary man.

Roberto Paiano
Salento University, Lecce, Italy