

Acknowledgment

The authors would like to acknowledge the support of the students and faculty of Department of Urban Education at University of Houston Downtown. A special thanks to the students at the ETC 3301 Educational Technology and MAT 6318 Advanced Educational Technology at University of Houston Downtown, Spring 2010, who provided initial ideas on the case stories. We also appreciate the following reviewers for their input and suggestions: Drs. Sue Mahoney, Jane Thielemann-Downs, Robert Johnson, and Laura Mitchell, with the University of Houston Downtown.

Irene L. Chen

The compilation of such a work as this requires the help of many people. First and foremost, I am thankful to Dr. Irene Chen for inviting me to participate as a contributor and co-editor of this exciting work. Her encouragement coached me through from beginning to end and for that, I am grateful.

In addition, I thank all those who contributed valuable case studies to serve as examples for the learning of future educators and education stakeholders. So many isolated cases are more than one teacher, school, or even district institution could ever experience. However, these selfless contributions, when added together, become a much needed resource to those preparing to educate the next generation in tomorrow's classrooms. Added thanks must be expressed to so many of our contributing authors for their willingness to provide additional supporting materials when asked, without regard to their own busy lives and schedules.

Last but not least, I thank my dear wife, Pam, for giving up so many weekends so I could take care of editing duties rather than engage in family outings. For her encouraging support I am beholden. Her generous love and devotion make me one of the most fortunate of men.
