It was an unavoidable call when I received an unexpected invitation from IGI Global, USA to prepare a book proposal and to act as an editor. I was glad to accept the invitation and planned to venture into a not-so-charted territory creating a valuable contribution in the field, which could benefit researchers, students and professionals. I am thankful to the IGI Global publishing team who offered valuable cooperation and constant support while preparing this book. I am immensely thankful to all the editorial advisory board members for their cooperation all along. I must mention that without the extremely valuable cooperation of external reviewers, the quality of the book could not have been maintained. They have offered their expertise and effort in preparation of this book by reviewing the book chapters critically. In the end, I am thankful to everyone else who directly and indirectly offered their assistance to make the preparation of this book a success.
