

Acknowledgment

I would like to acknowledge the generous financial support provided by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada that allowed me to work on the present collection. To the members of the Editorial Advisory Board, Bill Badke, Tatyana Dumova, Stylianos Hatzipanagos, Niki Lambropoulos, Karl Stolley, and Kirk St. Amant, I am very grateful for your diligent work on this project. My sincere thanks also go to José van Dijck, Anne Beaulieu, Ilias Karasavvidis, Christopher Sweet, Fred Truyen, Christopher Watts, and Kate Lyons for their willingness to serve as reviewers. The collective expertise of these two groups of scholars was invaluable to how knowledge was constructed in this volume. My thanks to Leslie Cameron for her help with copy-editing; it was a pleasure working with her. To my husband, Steven Tucker, I am deeply grateful for his unfailing support and honest criticism of my work. This book is dedicated to my children, Nikolai, Sofia and Milena, members of the future generation whose ideas about knowledge and expertise are developing in a very different environment from the one in which my views on the subject were formed.
