Editorial Preface

A Note of Appreciation

Donald Patrick Albert, Sam Houston State University, Huntsville, TX, USA

INTRODUCTION

With this issue the International Journal of Applied Geospatial Research closes out volume eight. I would like to thank all those authors, reviewers, and especially our editorial review board members for another fantastic effort. I would like to acknowledge Sam Houston State University for its continued recognition of IJAGR as a valued endeavor to support. The journal continues to draw submissions and accept manuscripts from around the world. Our articles are being cited more often, and while still modest, this is a positive trend for us to consider. The staff at IGI-Global, as always, provided professional and timely service to its authors and editors throughout the production period. While a cliché, the saying “I couldn’t do this without you,” is so true in this instance. As editor-in-chief, I can only do this job with cooperation from everyone involved in the process. It has been my pleasure to serve the applied geography community. I am looking forward to filling the next two volumes (9 and 10) after which I’ll write a sequel to “The first five years” (Albert 2014); it will be titled something such as “The second five years: Finishing the first decade.”
