This special issue celebrates the 4th anniversary of IJAEIS. The four papers selected for this issue present different important topics in the field of agricultural and environmental information systems.

In more than 4 years, IJAEIS has found its place among other scientific journals that try to study relevant topics at the intersection of environment and computer science.

We would like to acknowledge the people who served as reviewers. As editors-in-chief, we will continue to work hard to offer to our readers various and valuable scientific subjects in the field of agricultural and environmental information systems.
