“Not to forget you, who believed us and were part of this hard and amazing journey, we appreciate all our constituents who care about our important book topic.”

Firstly, we are acknowledging one another that in time of any hardship, health issue, and most importantly grief, we never stop contributing to this book. We are indebted to an unofficial team member, the software engineer, Mr. Zaniar Moradian, whose expertise in analyzing collected tedious data helped the research to reach its groundbreaking milestone, and for his dedication in creating a professional figure that captures the essence of the core message of our book; Tringle of Triple Threat (TTT).

We are grateful to Dr. Shartriya Collier-Stewart for accepting to write the foreword of this book and contribution from Dr. Kathy Lynn Gandhi who patiently and passionately reviewed our really long manuscript from her professional eyes. Research experts for providing vision and expertise on this issue and fellow activists in different CLD and disability organizations, we also acknowledge previous scholars, authors, and researchers; every book and article that has influenced this book directly or indirectly.

We are grateful to our immediate family members for their patience and for believing, supporting and encouraging us during crucial moments of this journey.

We are thankful to the Vakharia family for their courteous contribution of the book cover photo and for being the voice of children with special needs.

We thank our community members, numerous friends who supported us in one way or another and all those friends that understood when we were absent in relationships, events, parties, and gatherings. Also, unconventionally, we add technology to our list of dedications. Technology made it possible
