Ethics is a basic component of authentic leadership and frame follower feedback (Nichols & Erakovich, 2013). Leadership has to be recognized within a social context of ideas and practices, which give meaning and form to how leadership is enacted and experienced (Clark, Denham-Vaughan, & Chidiac, 2014). Leaders influence their followers by acting as role models of ethical conduct and being the object of identification and emulation to followers (Huhtala, Kangas, Lamsa, & Feldt, 2013).

Business ethics has been emphasized throughout the past decade (Yang, 2014). García-Sánchez et al. (2013) stated that ethical issues have received growing attention recently, after corporate scandals and during the current economic crisis. Organizations that want to promote the high levels of professionalism and business ethics should be especially interested in retaining employees who are more committed to the profession and organizational values (Shafer, Poon, & Tjosvold, 2013). Ethical leadership influences employees’ innovative work behavior through the mediation of intrinsic motivation at both group and individual level (Yidong & Xinxin, 2013).

Organizational ethical culture is related to organizational innovation (Riivari & Lämsä, 2014). Organizational ethical climate can encourage employees to act in accordance with ethical standards because an organizational ethical climate provides an important signal to employees as to which behaviors are acceptable or not in organization (Choi, Moon, & Ko, 2013).
