E–Justice: Information and Communication Technologies in the Court System

Agustí Cerrillo i Martinez
Open University of Catalonia, Spain

Pere Fabra i Abat
Open University of Catalonia, Spain
Related Content

Can Marketing Strategies Enhance the Adoption of Electronic Government Initiatives?
www.igi-global.com/article/can-marketing-strategies-enhance-the-adoption-of-electronic-government-initiatives/115907?camid=4v1a

New Technology Communication in American State Governments: The Impact on Citizen Participation
www.igi-global.com/chapter/new-technology-communication-american-state/67687?camid=4v1a

Examining the Role of Social Influence, Usefulness and Ease of Use for Determining the Mandatory Use of a Human Resource Information System in the Context of Saudi Ministries

Internetworked Social Movements and the Promise of Politics: A Case Study of the 15M Movement
Julen Figueras (2015). Promoting Social Change and Democracy through Information Technology (pp. 116-139).
www.igi-global.com/chapter/internetworked-social-movements-and-the-promise-of-politics/134256?camid=4v1a